The thread of the conversation was broken because some of the more timid reporters wanted to smoke the peace pipe with Red Jacket immediately, to keep from having to buy toupees later

"What do spirits look like, anyway?" Mr. Savage was asked, after he had sig-nified that Red Jacket was at peace with his pale-face brethren.

brother's bedside in Buffale and saw him pass over," he said. "He appeared exactly as in life, wearing the same garb. Only, having lived a beautiful life, he was more beautiful to look upon. If a person has lived a pure, spotless life his clothing is in accord with his life. I have seen spirits of men who were poor in this world who were garbed, in the spirit land, in rarest silks and laces. Spirits who were evil in this life are known by the spotted garments they wear. The good sprits take these evil spirits away and educate them, pray with them, and finally bring them back, regenerate and clad in spotless garb.

HERE'S WHERE T. R.'S THEORY WENT TO SMASH.

"Spirits are great educators," continued Savage, and thereupon exploded the Rogseveltian theory of "Me and Lincoln." "I am an illiterate man, with no education, yet the spirits have educated are and make me speak with "My friends have seen the spirit that controls my education standing behind me as I speak. I will not tell you his name, but he was the greatest American President who ever lived. He was a martyr."

As Roosevelt's spirit has not passed over it was obvious that Lincoin was Seven spirits, including those of my father and mother, told me through a trumpet there would be a big apple crop. I made apple barrels upor their advice and made a lot of money that way. So now I consult the spirits always in my business, and they always guide me right. But I would never apply that knowledge to making money in Wall street.

"The spirits help me invent things too. Up in my town, Homer Davis wanted to invent a door that would drop when closed and shut off all drafts. The spirits couldn't impress him with the proper knowledge, so he brought his idea to me. The spirits in stantly told me how to make it. I told Homer and he patented the thing-but
